

SOMETHING SUPERNATURAL

Words and music by Chuck Girard

© Dunamis Music 1974

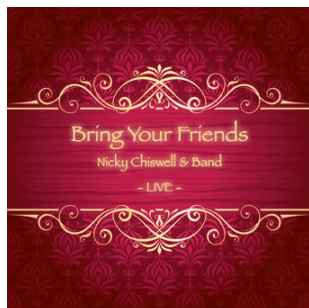

Chuck Girard is an amazing artist with a great story to tell. Check out more of his songs at www.chuck.org. He graciously gave permission for this song to be on the album. It is written from the perspective of his best friend watching him become a 'Jesus Freak'.

What does it matter to me to say I knew you when?
I know you now and you know I knew you then
You say you're different now
And yes, your life has changed
Something's surely different
Your whole thinking's rearranged
But I just can't accept
You say you owe it all to something
Supernatural

I used to know you when you'd go from bar to bar
Looking for a thrill with some potential movie star
You'd take 'em home with you and try to get it on You're tryin' to tell me
That this type of life is gone
I just can't accept
You say you owe it all to something
Supernatural

I get this feelin' that you're really on the level
But I just cannot believe that this could happen to you
This talk of Jesus sounds so soft and sentimental
And I wonder how can it be that it's really, really true?
And yet I see you no longer are a-cussin'
You won't shoplift with me and you shun the liquor store
And though you're still my friend
I don't know how to treat you
In many ways you're just no fun any more
And I just can't accept
You say you owe it all to something
Supernatural

When you explain it to me you know I feel the tension
But much of what you say
Is still beyond my comprehension
Still I'm beginning to feel
The pull of something
Supernatural

This song comes from the album Bring Your Friends
(© Nicky Chiswell 2011)

To buy this album or download this MP3, visit www.nickychiswell.com